Cleveland's Secretary of the Navy Dead of Appendicitis.

One Of The Richest Men In A City Of Millions.

New York, Feb. 2.—William Collins Whitney, former secretary of the navy, died a few minutes after 4 o'clock this afternoon, at his home on Fifth avenue. He died while under the influence of ether, administered preparatory to a second operation for appendicitis. By his bedside were his son, Harry Payne Whitney, and daughter, Dorothy Whitney, as well as Dr. William T. Bull, the chief surgeon in attendance. Mr. Whitney was in his sixty-fourth year.

William Collins Whitney was secretary of the navy from 1885 to 1889, and had been a prominent figure in politics and later as the owner of race horses. He was a graduate of Yale and of the Harvard law school, was inspector of schools in 1872, and corporation counsel for New York 1875-82. He was active in the movement against the Tweed ring and helped to organize the Young Men's Democratic club in 1871. Mr. Whitney was a son of the late General James S. Whitney. He was born at Conway, Mass., July 15 1841.

JEALOUS HUSBAND

Kills J. K. Shrader—Dead Man Denied His Guilt.

W. E. Neal Fired the Bullet in a Louisville Hotel—Harried a Hopkinsville Woman.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 2.—James K. Shrader, a prominent young lawyer of this city, who had just completed a term as Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney, died today at the City Hospital from the effects of a bullet wound inflicted at midnight by Wm. E. Neal, of Lawrenceburg, Ky. The trouble arose, it is said, over a suspicion which Neal entertained as to Shrader's relations with Mrs. Neal. Neal has been arrested and is now in jail.

The shooting occurred in the cafe of the Capital Hotel, where Neal found Shrader talking to the bartender. Neal, it is said, without speaking a word to Shrader, drew a .38-caliber revolver from his coat pocket and opened fire. Shrader started to run into the office when he saw the pistol. The first shot missed Shrader and passed close to several other guests of the hotel, who were sitting at a table writing. The second shot struck Neal's victim in the arm and the third entered the back. Shrader fell behind the desk in the office and bystanders attempted to disarm Neal as he prepared to fire again. He was thrown against the glass partition in the barroom in the effort to secure his revolver, broke the glass and severely cut his hand. He tore himself free from the men who were attempting to detain him and dashed out of the door, only to run into the arms of an officer.

Wm. E. Neal is 32 years old and was born in Lawrenceburg, Ky. He is the only son of Wm. Neal, a prominent farmer of Anderson county, who once represented his district in the Legislature. He left Lawrenceburg about four years ago and has since been living in Louisville except for one year, which he spent in Hopkinsville. He came here two weeks ago with his wife and has been living at the Capital Hotel.

Mr. Shrader was one of the best known of the younger men of the local bar. He was considered an able and energetic young man and was appointed Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney by Hon. Jos. M. Huffaker when he was first elected Commonwealth's Attorney. During his term in office Mr. Shrader did excellent work in the courts, but made a reputation as a high liver. When Mr. Huffaker was re-elected last November, he refused to reappoint Mr. Shrader on the ground that his conduct had not been becoming an officer of the court.

Since then he had been practicing his profession and has lived at the Capital Hotel.

Shrader was removed to the City Hospital, where he was joined by Mr. Huffaker and Dr. Harry Kelly, City Coroner, whom he had known in official life for several years. Just before being placed under an anesthetic to undergo an operation, in the hope of saving his life, Shrader, realizing that death was near, made an ante mortem statement to Dr. Kelly, saying Neal was laboring under a great misapprehension when he shot. He said he had never seen Mrs. Neal and had nothing to do with her. When the statement had been finished Mr. Shrader bade his friends good-bye, saying: "Give my love to all, I am not afraid to die."

Makes Full Denial.

Mrs. Josephine Robinson, of Hopkinsville, the mother of Mrs. William E. Neal, arrived in Louisville Monday in response to a telephone message sent that morning by Mr. Neal. She went at once to the home of her sister, Mrs. Tho. H. Glover, 1417 Garvin Place. She did not see her daughter until yesterday afternoon at the Louisville Hotel and immediately had her daughter's baggage sent to the house in Garvin Place.

The news of the action taken by her husband was broken to Mrs. Neal by George White, clerk of the Louisville Hotel, where Mrs. Neal had been staying since Saturday night under the name of her former husband, Wood. Mrs. Neal denied having had improper relations with James K. Shrader.

"I am guileless of anything of the kind," said Mrs. Neal, "and any statement to the contrary is false. I merely knew Mr. Shrader to bow to when I saw him in the hotel and never spoke to him beyond a few words in the presence of several other guests of the hotel. My husband told me Saturday morning that Mr. Bridwell, proprietor of the Capital Hotel, had seen me coming from Mr. Shrader's room the night before, and I told him how untruthful the statement was, and then and there decided to leave him for good. I came to the Louisville Hotel and he called on me there Saturday night and again on Sunday, saying he was sorry for what he had said and asked that I come and live with him at the Willard Hotel. He said then that he did not believe what Bridwell had told him, but I had made up my mind to leave him and told him we could not live together again."

C. R. Diawiddle, of the firm of Hickman, Watkins & Diawiddle, is looking after Mrs. Neal's interests, presumably with the purpose of establishing her innocence.

A Hopkinsville Girl.

Mrs. William E. Neal was formerly Miss Nelle Robinson, daughter of the late Prof. William Robinson, a school teacher and surveyor of this city, who died about three years ago. In the summer of 1899 his only daughter, a beautiful and petite blonde of sixteen, ran away with Henry G. Wood, proprietor of a feed store, and they were married at the St. George Hotel, in Evansville. They lived with th bride's parents until the father died, and then Mrs. Robinson opened a boarding house and the young couple went to live to themselves. A little girl was born. About two years ago the couple separated and a divorce was obtained without much attention being attracted to it. Mrs. Wood went back to live with her mother at her boarding house. William Neal was here last fall and met the young grass widow and just before Christmas she went with him to Louisville, whence word came that they were married on Dec. 9.

Neal is a brother of Mrs. J. C. Hoove, wife of the local agent of the Louisville & Nashville railroad.

EFFORT ABANDONED.

Burley Tobacco Interests Will Not Be Pooled.

The Burley Tobacco Growers' Association has abandoned the effort to handle the present crop of tobacco, and will release its members from the terms of the existing contract with the association by which they were to hold their product until such time as the association would dispose of it. President W. B. Hawkins stated that the association would be kept intact and that it would be thoroughly financed next season, when it will control, as it expects, the burley crop. This action brings to an end for this season the controversy in regard to the burley crop, and it will find its way to the market through other channels.

LOOSE TOBACCO.

About 50,000 Pounds Sold Here This Week.

There was a fairly good sale of loose tobacco on the floor by R. M. Woodbridge & Co., Tuesday. About 50,000 pounds were disposed of. All of the weed offered was very common and prices were considered good for the kinds sold. Lugs ranged from $2 to $2.90 and leaf from $3.75 to $4.00. Owing to the cold weather loose receipts have been light this week.

There were no sales on the breaks, but 83 hogheads of tobacco were disposed of privately. Receipts for the year amounts to ten hogheads. Sales for the year 295 hogheads.

Dear Sir: Our grandchild suffered with stomach and bowel trouble, and when other medicines had failed, we began giving her Syrup Pepsin. We are fully satisfied with the result, and I can highly recommend it to my friends for these troubles.

Yours respectfully,

Rev. Joseph G. Wright, editor of the Diocese of Springfield, Greenville, Illinois, writes: "I am pleased to acknowledge the merit of your medicine, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and thank you for placing such an efficacious remedy for stomach and bowel troubles on the market. I always keep your medicine in the house, and use no other kind. For persons of sedentary habits a laxative and stomach tonic is a necessity, and Syrup Pepsin meets my requirements in this line better than any medicine I ever used. Keeping me in splendid health."

EGYPTIAN CEMETERY.

Relics of Prehistoric Times Found in the Valley of the Nile.

Mr. John Ward, F.R.S.A., writing in the London Antiquary, gives some very interesting details of excavation work carried on up the Nile some months ago. Many thousand tombs, mostly prehistoric, have been opened. Most of them have no inscriptions, what ever, but in some cylinders and scarabs were found, with inscriptions so old that it will require great study to decipher their meaning. Most of the remains are mere skeletons, and have never been mummified. These were generally found lying on their side, their face to the east, their knees drawn up to their chest. Nearly all of the poor old skulls still possessed excellent teeth. Some exquisitely formed alabaster dishes and vases, not turned in the lathe, but wrought by hand, and a cylinder of solid gold were found in the tombs, nearly all of which had been tunneled into by robbers thousands of years ago. In one tomb a fine papyrus was discovered; the owner had it buried beside him, that he might pursue it at his leisure in the future state. It was a portion of the Egyptian Bible, the "Book of the Dead." Many of the larger tombs had facades built of brick, with one or two chambers outside the rock-cut portion. Others were closed by hut-shaped erections over the mouth of the shaft, and it was very extraordinary (says Mr. Ward) on descending one of these shafts to see several lateral chambers cut in the crumbling rock, each with its ghastly occupant, placidly lying on its side, its hand up to its head, or else with the knees drawn up to the chin. But the most curious style of burial, and one that has never been seen before, so far as Mr. Ward knows, is the following: Numbers of boxes were found, especially in the northern part of the huge cemetery, about three feet by two feet, and nine inches deep. In each of these there was found a complete adult skeleton. How the ancient folk were doubled up into such small spaces passes belief, and yet they had been boxed up with the flesh on their bones. Some similar boxes were found, but made of red baked clay.

MODERN METHODS.

Baby Gets Better Treatment Now Than Ever Before.

Hospital methods are adopted more each year in the private treatment of babies; the methods, that is to say, of the modern hospital conducted under the most modern supervision, says Collier's Weekly. The cradle is doomed and all its rocking memories. The child lies upon its bed and is not picked up and carried about the room even when it yells. Visitors and relatives are no longer encouraged to pound it in the ribs, pinch its chin or transfer microbes to its lips. This strictness is laughed at by ribald outsiders and resented by relatives of the old regime, which, like every other fossil, is attributed to nature, no doubt with justice, but without much relevance. Actually, this intelligent treatment of infancy is doing much to check nervousness in our children, to protect them from bad habits and needless exertions and to make them self-reliant. Babyhood indeed is the best conducted age at present. When the child grows older it meets undoubted loss in the substitution of nurse's for mother's care, a tendency encouraged by the new activities of women and by city life. At the beginning, however, in the first weeks and months of his existence, when change and development are more rapid than at any other period, the human being has never had such devout treatment as it is the happy fashion to bestow upon him now. He is treated for his own welfare instead of for the amusement of his friends.

Unique Wedding Party.

A short time ago a wedding took place at St. Luke's church, Reddell Hill, Cradley Heath, at which a man named John Hill was married to a young woman whose name was also Hill. The fathers of the bride and bridegroom were each named John Hill, the wife's name was also named Hill, and both the bridegroom and bride resided at Old Hill.

CHINESE OF PENANG.

Adopting Modes and Customs of Their European Neighbors.

The Penang-born Chinese are not slow to recognize that to be progressive they must keep pace with the onward march of the times. So general has this feeling become that within the last decade rapid strides have been made in the direction of reform. There are, however, still many difficult barriers to be negotiated, but with determination these may be surmounted, says the Penang Straits Echo.

It may be pertinently asked what the goal is at which the Straits Chinese should aim. To begin with, they should adopt the European costume, as the Japanese have done. A foreigner to Penang, or the native states, can easily distinguish the difference between a Straits-born Chinese and a celestial proper. This, to some extent, shows that the Straits Chinese are progressing in the right direction. The fashion of the latest cut is closely watched by them, so much so that in Kuala Lumpur an outfitting department owned by a Penang-born Chinese has been established to further this object: house and buggy trousers, which are an innumerable to cyclists; coats as if made to provide for bodily growth; Sin-Chang shoes from China are gradually but surely giving way to tight trousers, collars, jackets and English-made boots, while as for the headgear, white hats are becoming popular, such as "Panamas," the Straits and Ellwood's.

White to the Chinese is a sign of the deepest mourning, but the Bahas of to-day have learned the absurdity of sticking to antiquated customs and sentiments. The toweling (quene), a standing menace to cyclists, mechanics and others, is wisely discarded by some, but this deterioration of ancient custom is still looked upon with great horror by the fair sex, who, in conjunction with the scholars of Chinese literature, retain their conservative admiration for it. A friend of the writer, who proved to have the courage of his convictions, recently informed him that it almost threatened to result in divorce when his first wife saw him without his "tail," but after she had got used to the loss she was heard to say that it was his husband's sensible example. The change in this direction is impeded, but with the return of the Penang lads who are sent to complete their studies in Europe this obstacle may eventually be removed. The uninitiated, too, have caught the contagion of reform, but in a lesser degree.

Turning to their social life, the bright and shady side-lights require to be touched upon. In regard to the relationship between husband and wife it cannot be gainsaid that an ornate desire to place the latter on an equal footing is more noticeable each day. A husband is not now ashamed to give his compeer a seat with him in an open conveyance, or even escort her to a picnic, where necessarily the men and women mix with each other freely. On the other hand, cases of wives leaving their husbands are of frequent occurrence, the real causes of which may be summarized as follows: The husband leads a life of debauchery, cultivated in the so-called intellectual improvement clubs, where literature, supposed to be their primary object, is almost unknown. The wife, finding that the husband longs more for his club than his home, naturally resents the change, and, her reasoners being in vain, she seeks the company of her relatives.

As against the fair sex, the horrible scourge of Peh Bui is in a very great extent responsible for her downfall. She first indulges in a "gentle flutter," only to be lured into the irresistible influence as if by magic, and from small it grows to big stakes, until the husband discovers that his wife has substituted her jewelry for gilt or imitation.

PHILOSOPHY OF A TRAILER.

Negro Who Ran His Horse to Death While He Slept.

Charles Littlefield, according to the Illustrated Sporting News, tells the following reminiscence of his early days as a jockey, when racing had a strong hold in the south, some time before the war.

It was down near Alexandria, La., a hazy old negro known as "Uncle Eph," who had won a numerous reputation as a trainer of thoroughbreds, because he had been lucky enough to train two or three good horses, was preparing a horse for a race at mile heats. Eph was above all things an optimistic philosopher. Nothing that could happen would he profess to wish otherwise, and Mr. Littlefield's story aptly illustrates this peculiar trait.

Uncle Eph stretched himself in the shade of a big live oak that was growing in the infield, not far from the judges' stand, and instructed his little boy exercise to gallop the horse two miles. Not only in the fading of their head, but in all the minute corners of their daily lives the "signs" must be right before anything is done, or "wot be done."

If a cheese is to be cut it must be done in the increase of the moon, or by the same token, it will fade away with incredibly rapidity before the daily demands of the family, who will yet derive a miraculously scanty nutriment therefrom; whereas if, in obedience to the sage counsel of the elders of the house, it be done as the moon waxes, it will be like the widow's measure of meal and crumb of oil.

If once people begin to set upon the position of the sun in the zodiac be determined from the book of fate, the almanac, otherwise it is only a matter of time when the frost below will leave them from their places. The swine must not be slaughtered with disregard to the stellar divinities or the pork will dwindle in the barrel as if an army corps were feeding thereon.

In the sowing, tilling and harvesting of their crops, of course, the same fidelity to the old folk traditions of their fathers is shown; but in this they are not peculiar, for here their ideas are shared by the mechanic of every class and race. In a Waterloo business place recently, where these signs were under animated discussion for an hour, only one man raised the voice of skepticism against those fancies, and all but two of those expressed positive faith in one or more of the signs of Fayette Dutch folk lore.

FARM WORK BY "SIGNS."

Quaint Customs Find Favor Among the Pennsylvania Dutch.

The farmers of the township of Fayette, adjoining Waterloo, are largely of Pennsylvania Dutch origin, says the Rochester Post Express. They are a hardy and thrifty race, and for general intelligence compare favorably with their neighbors of Anglo-Saxon stock. They are, however, full of the quaint superstitions and rural folk lore of their forefathers, and many interesting anecdotes are told by Fayette people illustrating the length to which the good Dutch yeomanry go in their devotion to the "signs" in the conduct of their farms and the routine of their lives.

In all earthly matters the almanac seems to be their bible, and the moon and the constellations are as really venerated, though in a different way, as they were by their yellow-haired ancestors along the shores of the North Sea. Not only in the fading of their head, but in all the minute corners of their daily lives the "signs" must be right before anything is done, or "wot be done."

If a cheese is to be cut it must be done in the increase of the moon, or by the same token, it will fade away with incredibly rapidity before the daily demands of the family, who will yet derive a miraculously scanty nutriment therefrom; whereas if, in obedience to the sage counsel of the elders of the house, it be done as the moon waxes, it will be like the widow's measure of meal and crumb of oil.

CONCERNING CONSERVATISM.

Is Good It of the Right Sort—False Phases of It.

It is good to be not very quick to outsize one's future prospects of large property, but it seems to be better not to be blind to evident promises, says Cent Cent. Conservatism is not merely the reverse of go-ahead activity. Nowadays it has become a cloak-word for those who, through ignorance or motive, cry down all that is new; it is, in fact, a business with some—it takes time to prove them wrong; meanwhile they are building reputations for cautiousness.

There to-day any conspicuous railroad, or mine or other enterprise that, at the onset, did not meet with discouragement or influence or incompetent expert opinion, to say nothing of natural and fostered adverse public opinion? Is there a going business of any sort that has not had its share of more or less genuine initial disaster? And the fact that to day there are thousands of going businesses shows how much sounder, and, therefore, more admirable, was the faith of their founders.

Conservatism is a good quality, but ulterior purposes of irresponsibility, masking as "conservatism," discover all the discredit that can be given. Conservatism on the part of investors is good if it is of the right sort, and not a misallied timidity, lack of faith or suspicious distrust. Nothing can more seriously injure a country's interests than conservatism—of the wrong sort.

After a week of more than two years, Senator Ford and co-tenant John Feland have been allowed expenses in the cost of 1902. The bill making the appropriation failed to get through the last Senate. They will get several hundred dollars each for attorney's fees, etc.

Ollie James started an oratorical rough house Wednesday and Stanley, Smith and Sharley all got into the game and the quartette gave the Bill Taylor defenders a lambasting that set the galleries wild. The Kentucky youngsters are all pretty handy with language.

Mrs. Florence Maybrick, who has been released from an English prison, was given a 15 sentence in 1889 and has been improved ever since. There has always been a serious jab in the minds of many people of her guilt, as she was convicted on circumstantial evidence. She was born in Mobile, Ala., in 1884.

Arthur Goebel called Harvey Myers "an infamous scoundrel," a lying dog and a base hypocrite," while Myers was making a speech before a Legislative committee advocating a bill creating a judgeship in Kenton county. Myers, who was his lifelong political enemy, was enlisting Gov. Goebel when his brother arose and denounced him. Myers did not resent the insult and the trouble blew over.

Edith D. Berry, aged 30, is up against a business proposition in the form of a breach of promise suit by Miss Mollie Miller, aged 36, at Owensboro. She wants $5,000 damages. Miss Miller alleges that defendant promised to elope with her to Rockport, Ind. Oct. 8, 1902, and that she was ready, able and willing to go, but he failed to keep his appointment, but on the previous day left for Oklahoma and stayed away until last September. Mr. Berry, it is understood, is preparing to wed another girl.

All Stuffed Up

That's the condition of many sufferers from catarrh, especially in the morning. Great difficulty is experienced in clearing the head and throat.

No wonder catarrh causes headache, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, pollutes the breath, deranges the stomach and affects the appetite. To cure catarrh, treatment must be constitutional—alterative and tonic. I was afflicted with catarrh. I took medicines of different kinds, giving each a fair trial, but gradually grew worse until I could hardly hear, taste or smell. I then concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after taking five bottles I was cured and have not had any return of the disease since." Eugene Fossum, Lebanon, Ky.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Cures catarrh—it soothes and strengthens the mucous membrane and builds up the whole system.

Ollie James made his maiden speech in Congress Wednesday. In discussing the President's reference to extradition he ridiculed his recommendation in fiery language, declaring that the Republican Governor of Indiana was even now protecting the assassin of Gov. Goebel from punishment in Kentucky. He reviewed the murder, the evidence against Taylor and Finley and declared that the Federal government should exercise the right to remedy such a situation. Democrats cheered him and Crumpacker, of Indiana, attempted a reply.

The indefinite postponement of the Heelin bill, to disfranchise negro voters by an educational qualification, virtually kills the bill. It is very doubtful if the bill would accomplish the results aimed at. The ante-bellum negroes are getting fewer in number every year and under the liberal public school laws of Kentucky nearly all negro children are given a fair common school education.

The February National Magazine.

In the February number of the National Magazine, Socialism and the Labor Union, by Senator Marcus A. Hanna, is a contribution of great significance to the nation. It is American, wholesome, comprehensive, readable. It contains the following statement of the Senator's plans for his future: "I took some time to consider the work of the Civic Federation, and am firmly convinced that it is the object to which I desire to consecrate the remaining years of my life." This seems to answer the people who are wondering if Mr. Hanna desires the presidency. Affairs at Washington, by Joe Mitchell Chapple, deals with current national affairs and tells some good stories of public men, with many new and attractive portraits. Interesting observations on the character and habits of turkeys and geese form the basis of Dallas Lore Sharp's Farm-Yard Studies in this issue. Joe Mitchell Chapple's racy contribution, The Owner of the "Rolling Peanut," deals with George Ade, playwright and humorist.

Our Unique Volcano, a natural wonder that we acquired with the Philippines, is described by William Raymond Blanchard, late of the Twenty-sixth Volunteers. A plea that our national emblem should be born—both national and emblematic—is made by Edna Dean Proctor in a poem, Columbia's Emblem, reprinted from the Century, and in an original article, Our National Floral Emblem.

One of the strongest as well as one of the shortest contributions in the magazine is 1904, political forecast by Frank Putnam, in which he urges the nomination of Roosevelt and Hearst to head the rival tickets.

Winter life in Uncle Sam's great western part is vividly portrayed in Sky-Runners of the Yellowstone, by Lewis R. Freeman.

In the line of poetry, the February National offers Fireside Journeys, by Jean Wilson; Columbia's Emblem, by Edna Dean Proctor; Revelation, by Frank Putnam; and a variety in short stories is furnished in The Indecision of Maud, by Sarah A. Pratt; In The Night and The Storm, by Teresa Strickland; Spelling the Enemy, by Margaret Sullivan Burke; the sixth story of June Winston, by Carrie Hunt Lettice; and Strangers, by Thomas W. Steep.

George T. Richardson and Kate Sanborn furnish respectively the stage and book reviews.

Some interesting features of The Home department are a witty analysis of typical Boston Girls, by Kate Gannett Wells; A Harmony Cure for the Blues, and the Woman's Burden, a very funny rhymed catalogue of the housewife's daily duties. The whole number is handsomely illustrated.

R. Y. PENDLETON, SR.

Brief Sketch of Prominent Citizen of Pembroke.

The death of Mr. R. Y. Pendleton, Sr., of Pembroke, a brief notice of which appeared in the Kentucky of last Tuesday, removed from that section one of the best men of the county. His father, Robert Y. Pendleton, was a native of Virginia, having been born in Spotsylvania county, and moved to Christian county more than 90 years ago. After about a year he returned to the Old Dominion and entered the army, serving in the war of 1812. A few years later he returned to Kentucky and located in Christian county, near Pembroke.

The grandfather of the subject of this sketch was a noted Baptist minister of Virginia.

Mr. Pendleton was a very successful farmer and large land owner. His wife was Miss Helen Slaughter, of this county. In politics he was a Democrat. He was also a member of the Masonic order, being the first Master of the Pembroke lodge, which was organized about 30 years ago. At the last annual meeting of the lodge he was re-elected.

He was a man well liked by all who knew him and in his death Pembroke has lost one of its most valued citizens.

The body was interred in the Pembroke cemetery Tuesday.

End of Bitter Fight.

"Two physicians had a long and stubborn fight with an abscess on my right lung," writes J. F. Hughes, of DuPont, Ga., "and gave up. Everybody thought my time had come. As a last resort I tried Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption. The benefit I received was striking and I was on my feet in a few days. Now I've entirely regained my health." It conquers all coughs, colds and throat and lung troubles. Guaranteed by R. C. Hardwick, druggist. Price 50c, and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

STICKEN WITH PARALYSIS

A Month Ago And Died Last Tuesday.

Mrs. Drucilla Armstrong died at the home of Mr. Ed Woodriddle, about two miles west of Crofton Tuesday from the effects of a stroke of paralysis.

She was 95 years old and was stricken about a month ago. She was a sister of the late Green Woodriddle and was probably the oldest woman in North Christian.

David Woodriddle the railroad man of Hopkins county, is her nephew.

She leaves a large number of descendants and relatives in northern portion of the county.

Bright's Disease is more dreaded by physicians than any of the serious disorders with which they have to deal because of its insidious and malignant character. If prompt action were taken when headaches, urinary disorders, digestive troubles first appear, much suffering and sorrow would be averted. Prickly Ash Bitters will quickly stop the spread of the disease, quiet the inflammation, heal the kidneys and bladder, strengthen and regulate the liver, and drive poison and impurities out of the system. CAPTAINS ON MANY SEAS NEVER WITHOUT PE-RU-NA.

"Give Me My Compass and Pe-ru-na and I Will Steer Clear of All Wrecks."

Pe-ru-na Known and Praised on Land and Sea.

"A sick sailor is a pretty helpless man. I have found that Peru-na will do more to restore one than any other medicine I know, and I have carried a couple of bottles on board for many seasons. Seven years ago Peru-na cured me of bronchial trouble in a few weeks and gave me such new life and nerve force that I certainly believe in selling you of it."

"Give me my compass and Peru-na and I will steer clear of wrecks of all kinds and land in port safe and well with vessel and men."—Capt. L. T. Carter, 123 10th Avenue, Pensacola, Florida.

Capt. R. A. Watson, M. E., 48 Elizabeth street, Ottawa, Ont., writes: "Peru-na has my heartfelt endorsement. If there is any place that you are helpless when ill it is on board a steamer, at sea, miles away from any assistance. Sometimes two or three of my men would be sick at one time and seriously cripple the force, but since we have learned of the value of Peru-na, by using a few doses they recuperate very quickly. We use it for colds, lung trouble and kidney diseases, and have also found it very fine for grippe.

"Peru-na is always one of the most important supplies of my steamer."—R. A. Watson.

With a bottle of Peru-na aboard sailors have a remedy on which they can rely.

Commodore U. S. Navy. Commodore Somerville Nicholson, of the United States Navy, in a letter from J. R. St. St. W., Washington, D. C., says:

"I unhesitatingly recommend Peru-na to all persons suffering from catarrh."—S. Nicholson.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peru-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address: Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

FOR HIS HONESTY

How a Filipino of Cebu Proved His Trustworthiness.

But Maj. Smith's Lesson Was Lost on the Unhappy American Citizens and Now He Transmits Them
Not at All.

Our army officers serving in the Philippines have often found themselves charged with the performance of duties entirely outside of their ordinary professional work. They have been called upon from time to time to guide the political machinery of towns and cities and provinces, to give direction to social customs, and to mould anew the every day affairs of the communities in which they served.

As a rule the people of the Philippines,
in common with most oriental people, have a vague conception of the requirements of the Golden Rule, or the Ninth Commandment. In attempting to reach the great principles embraced in these creeds, our officers and men have usually found the ground on which the seed was sown, productive of good results, but fruitful also in producing new and unexpected tares with the wheat.

The experience of Maj. Smith while living in Cebu may afford a fair illustration of the trend of a half awakened conception of moral obligations among the people of that primitive Mohammedan city, due to the missionary work of the major and his soldier companions.

After making a purchase one day at the counter of a native dealer, the major was unable to find a paper dollar he had taken with him to pay for the purchase.
Leaving the article on the merchant's counter he returned to his quarters and after detailing the circumstances of the loss to his servant, a young Filipino, Presido de Corazon Perez e Altura, by name, sent him with another dollar to pay for the article and bring it home.
The servant speedily accomplished his errand and after returning hastened to place a dollar bill in the major's hands, stating that he had found it on the floor beside the counter where the officer had stood when he made the purchase.

The major was delighted at the evidence of honesty shown by the young Filipino, who had probably never possessed as his own so great a sum, or had ever before been subjected to so great a temptation to be dishonest, and determined to give the young man an objection on the value of honesty.

"Keep it," he said to the Filipino, "I will make a present of it to you. Keep it for your honesty."

And so a great lesson had been taught,
and the major was pleased, and the servant was pleased, the former because good seed had been sown in Cebu, and the latter because he had become a "Croesus among his fellows."

Not long thereafter the major's wife, while purchasing some fruit in the market, dropped a small coin in the dust, and being unable to find it after a brief search, returned to her home, leaving Presido de Corazon Perez e Altura to follow with the fruit she had bought.

The youth lingered at the place where the money had been lost and searched for it in the dust until he found it, and then hastened home with the fruit, but misconstruing the object of his search he had received from the major kept the coin and returned silent.

When the maiden came again to the market and her servant had found the coin she had lost.

And so the object lesson of honesty taught by the major seemed lost as well as with the coin. The tares had early made their appearance among the wheat.

The major was wroth when he was informed that his trusted servant had been unfaithful, and hastily calling the young man into his presence upbraided him for his dishonesty. The servant pleaded the vigorous words of the major in amazement and with much evident distress.

"You found the money," roared the major, "and you kept it!"

"Si Senor," replied the servant,
"I did not."

"No Senor," replied the man, "It was just like the other time, you know. It was just like the other time," he repeated earnestly, "and I kept it for my honesty."

BOLOGNA'S TOWERS

The Peculiar Leaning Structures in Italy That Are World Famous.

They Are Very Old and Have Figured in Literature, Art and History
—One of Them Was Recently Said.

The sale the other day of the leaning Gherisenda tower at Bologna to Baron Raimondo Franchetti, a well known composer, calls to mind the fact, which may not be very well known, that Bologna has two of these leaning towers.
The leaning tower of Pisa is famous the world over, but comparatively little is known of the Gherisenda tower and its companion the Asinelli tower, at Bologna.

The latter derives its name from Gherardo degli Asinelli, by whom it was begun in 1109. It is 292½ feet high and its inclination is as much as three feet four inches from the center of gravity. It can easily be ascertained, and possesses a fine view of its surroundings. The near neighbor of Asinelli is the Gherisenda tower, built about the same time as the former, by the brothers Filippo and Oddo Gherisenda. It is only 136 feet high, but it leans eight feet from the perpendicular to the south and three feet to the east.

There are two theories as to the cause for the remarkable inclination of these massive structures. One is that originally these towers were built perpendicular and that some violent convulsion of nature had in the dim and distant past, of which no record was left, had thrown the towers out of plumb, but not enough to destroy them.
The other view held is that the towers were constructed exactly as they are seen to-day, the architect aiming at the odd and unique in their construction.

Goethe, the celebrated German poet and author, held the latter opinion.

THE GHERISENDA TOWER.

and wrote as follows regarding these two towers: "The leaning tower has a rich and noble look, and yet it is most probable that it was built thus designedly.
This seems to me an explanation of the aberrancy. In the troublous times of the thirteenth century, when the tower was erected, every powerful family had a tower. By and by, the very possession of such a building became a mark of importance and distinction, and as at last a perpendicular tower became a perfectly common and everyday object, a leaning tower was built. Architect and owner attained their object; the mark of upright towers are just placed at, and all spectators hurry on to examine the leaning towers."

With this view of the matter, Garsino may be considered to have been in rivalry a little after the Asinelli tower and may be looked upon as a monument of architectural family pride.
The leaning tower, the popular American author, held the same view as Goethe as regards the origin of the peculiar inclined character of the tower.
He examined them carefully, and in defense of his views that "no accident, no dislocation of the columns, and not the least derangement of the walls of the towers within or without,"
must lead one to conclude that the towers were built out of the perpendicular and not made so by earthquake after they were completed.

One reason why it is thought that the towers were originally upright is that the foundations on one side appear to be buried, and it is said that there is an ancient painting which represents one of the towers as upright.
Dante was impressed by the sight of the leaning towers and in his "Inferno" he compares the giant Antaeus, who bends toward him to lift him down into the depths of inferno, to the Gherisenda tower, "when a cloud passes over it." Bologna is much distressed over the sale of the Gherisenda tower and the government has been urged to interfere for the purpose of securing it.

COMING AUTO RACE

A Big International Contest Planned for Next Summer.

It Will Take Place in Germany and the Route Selected Here is the Approval of Emperor William and Prince Henry.

The international automobile race planned for the summer of 1904 will be run in Germany, and the route, which has just been decided upon, has won the approval of Emperor William. His indorsement will make easy the overcoming of possible objections by the authorities of the districts through which the race will be run. The German trio, representing the automobilists of the Fatherland, not only carried off the cup at the international race run in Ireland so successfully last summer, but won for the Automobile club of Germany the privilege of choosing the course for the challenge race for 1904. "A great victory," was proclaimed, but after careful consideration the Tannus route was chosen.

The Irish course was like a figure eight, but the course over which victory will be run in Germany is circular.

ROUTE OF THE RACE

lar, with only one angle, at its southwest corner, to break its subterfuge character, as it will be readily seen by a glance at the map of the route. The route is called the Saalburg-Limb-urg, from the towns at either end of the course. The starting post will probably be at Dornholzhausen, a hamlet frequented by guests in the summer time.
The start and finish at Saalburg. The total distance from start to finish is 85 miles, and is over roads of remarkable smoothness and with few bad or dangerous turns.

Prince Henry of Prussia, who himself is a practical and enthusiastic automobilist, and has been over the proposed route many times, says of it:
"One of the most beautiful roads I have ever seen, and as smooth as a bowling alley." The party of inspection which went over the route reported that it was of but one opinion, namely, that there was no part of the road which was dangerous beyond the curves, which in the majority of cases could be seen well ahead. The surface was well constructed, with but few damp parts, and the steep hills met with along the whole course were found to offer no difficulty in climbing, as there were none which gave more than a fair test to the powers of the racing autos which would take part in the contest. In short, it was pronounced an ideal course, in some cases where the curves are considered too severe it is proposed to re-rectify the fault.

The main hill of the entire course is encountered on the other side of Weilburg. It rises at an angle of 15, and brings one to a broad and even rising road, along which four automobiles could easily race abreast. About nine miles before Limburg, bearing now to the west directly, there is an ugly sharp curve to be made, and this will probably require some alteration before the race. But a splendid bit of road now passes through open country past Ober-hofenbach, along which the automobile flies easily down to Limburg.

A clear, straight run of 28 kilometers —17½ miles—is given from Limburg to

THE WORST TURN ON THE COURSE.

Neudorf and Kirchberg. Indeed, with its fine castle, and Krimmler comes next.
Then Trarbach, with its old castle and the new whorls bequeathed by the late Emperor Frederick to her youngest daughter, Princess Margaret, who is married to Prince Louis of Battenberg.
Owing to the rich population of the district the roads are more than usually well kept, much money being spent upon their maintenance.
Passing along cross roads, making an inlet turn for the southern segment of the circle instead of continuing for some ten miles more to Frankfurt, the Hesse automobiles will make for Obersauer, leave Homburg a little on the right and go back to Saalburg, a distance of all 135 kilometers 400 meters.
A grand stand is to be erected on the crest of Saalburg hill to seat 40,000 people, and it is at this point that the majority will gather to witness the start and finish of the race. The interest of Emperor William in the race insures the attendance of adequate numbers of soldiers to police the course, and prevent the obstructing of the roadway by the spectators.

There are people who let themselves run down physically until they live just on the edge of the danger line, between health and sickness. Some day they stagger across the line, and disease, like a bird of prey swoops down on them and they have to fight for life. The weak body invites disease. As the strength of the body is solely derived from food digested and assimilated, so physical weakness points to the fact that the food eaten is not assimilated and the body is growing weak through lack of nutrition.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, and so enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food, by which the bodily strength is alone sustained.

"Thanks to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," writes Mr. Charles H. German, of Leighton, Pa. "It is the only medicine that has done me any good. I tried everything I could think of to cure indigestion, and found I was only throwing away money.
Then I heard of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and tried a bottle of it, and to my joy found it was doing me good. I used six bottles of it, and am now cured. It is the best medicine on earth."

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains, you lose, therefore accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

RED BANANAS AGAIN.

Have Long Been Scarce—Fast Fruit Steamers Help Trade.

"Red bananas once more are plentiful in the New York market, and are likely to be so for some time," said a fruit commission merchant to a New York Press reporter. "I can remember the time when there were more red bananas than yellow ones, 15 or 20 years ago. Then they got scarce, six years ago only a few bunches came to New York for the Christmas trade, and they went to dealers at $75 a bunch, the highest price ever paid here for such fruit. "The red banana was the first to come to this country. Then it was found that the yellow fruit was more easily raised, kept longer and clung better to the stalk. This last factor was an important one, as a great loss comes from bananas dropping from a bunch. More yellows grow on a bunch. For these reasons the red bananas practically disappeared from the markets and only a few bunches were brought here. "The fast fruit steamers have been responsible for lowering the price of bananas. When we had to get our fruit from the sailing vessels we never knew whether we would have enough to supply the market, for the vessels would be delayed by storms and might come in with spoiled cargoes. To day these fruit steamers are as regular as passenger ships, and we know almost to a bunch how much the cargo will amount to."

"SQUATTERS" IN MAINE.

Land Owners Want to Keep Forests for Lumbering Purposes.

Away up on the northeastern border of Maine, along the St. John and Aroostook rivers, says the New York Tribune, are hundreds of little clearings in the forests, where "squatters" from New Brunswick have come in, cleared a few acres of land not belonging to them, built log houses, raised small crops and large families and settled down to the serene and happy existence known only to the Acadians, who are the direct descendants of the refugees from the Land of Evangeline. The men who own the lands have tried in all sorts of ways to get rid of these unwelcome intruders, on numerous occasions have invoked the law to drive them away. Then followed evictions by the score, with scenes as pathetic and distress as bitter as any ever witnessed in Ireland, but the remedy has always been ineffective, for more "squatters" came in to occupy the lands, and not all the law nor all the sheriff in Maine are powerful enough to keep the mild-mannered but persistent Acadians off the domains of the rich timber land owners.

The little farms increased from acres to hundreds, and the timber land owners appealed to the state to do something lest their entire holdings be one day absorbed by "squatters," and so last winter the legislature passed an act appropriating enough money to buy 50,000 acres of the lands to be presented to the settlers, thus making good the title to what they had come and taken without leave. The state also has "squatters" to contend with, for many of them have settled on the school lands, and lately it has been decided, instead of evicting them, to sell them the lands they are occupying at a nominal price. For the purpose of making these transfers State Land Agent Ring has recently made a trip to Letter E plantation and in a short time the state will have full title to their little farms.

While it is not denied that the settlement of the rich Aroostook lands by the industrious and well-behaved Acadians must result in great benefit to the state, the land owners are strongly opposed to the colonization process. They bought the lands and paid for them, and want to keep them for lumbering purposes; they are looking to their own personal interests, and not to the interests of the state in future years. It is frequently pointed out that the owners of the lands got the property, or much of it, for a mere song, but their title is good, whatever they paid, and while the "squatters" who want to farm and the sportsmen and poachers who want to shoot and fish complain that the rich men are monopolizing the earth up north, no one has any legal ground for complaint. The wild lands of the state were at first parceled out as bounties to revolutionary soldiers, but many of the landowners failed to pay the taxes from the lots given to them, and so the lands came back by forfeit to the state. Then came the famous land auctions of old days, when vast tracts were bought by wealthy men at a few cents an acre. After generations of lumbering there is more spruce left in Maine than can be cut, at the present rate, in half a century to come, allowing nothing for renewal of growth, and now the pulp and paper industry has come, doubling the value of the timber, and causing the big corporations to scramble for all the desirable lands in sight.

THE CRANBERRY.

Where They Grow and Some Peculiarities of the Fruit.

The name of the cranberry is probably derived from the peculiar appearance of the bud before expanding into the perfect flower. The stem, calyx and petals somewhat resemble the neck, head and bill of a crane, giving the fruit the name of "cranberry" or "craberry." The small variety of cranberries is found on the peat bogs of the New England states, of Pennsylvania and westward to Wisconsin. A certain variety, says the Prairie Farmer, is found in the bogs of Virginia and Minnesota and in the British possessions. New Jersey is one of the great cranberry states, and in South America, Russia and occasionally on the barren plains of Siberia the cheery little berry is found. It grows wild in many parts of North America, but the two chief points of cultivation are Cape Cod and New Jersey, with minor points in Maine and the northwest states. When the supply was limited and could be procured only from the wild marshes, cranberries were very cheap. But since they have been made an object of cultivation and been displayed in the markets, many persons heretofore ignorant of the existence or use of such a fruit have experimented with it, and the consequence is that cranberries now bring a very high price.

The cranberry is peculiar in its tastes and habits. On some soils it cannot be made to grow at all, while on others it is hardy and easily propagated. In such places vines dropped upon the ground often take root and grow. Its favorite resorts are swamps and morasses which contain rich decomposed vegetable matter known as muck. During the wet season the swamps flood, but if they are suitable for cranberry growth they must dry during a portion of the season, though they seldom dry to a depth of more than one-half inch. Vines may appear to flourish in a swamp which is wet the entire season, but if closely observed it will be seen that the roots are embedded in the moss growing above the water, the moss having the property of retaining enough moisture to support the vine. The soil best adapted is an equal mixture of coarse sand and muck. In a few years this will form a soil of rich black sand. If a plant is on weak land it will run to vine.

In New Jersey there is a variety in which the fruit is cream colored when fully ripe, and remains so even if kept for many months. They are of good size, excellent flavor and keep well. The bright colored berries bring the best prices, though not always of the best flavor. Some berries turned after picking. The best flavored varieties are of medium size, many of the large varieties being hollow. Small berries are the best keepers and also the most sold. The work of planting the vines often falls to the women. Two work together, the one dropping the vines into the drills from a bundle which she carries under her arm, the other following with a hoe. The picking season is eagerly looked forward to by the owner and his help. In the marshes of New Jersey they begin picking a certain variety about the middle of September. The other picking usually begins about the first of October, as all berries must be off the vines before frost comes. In the fine October weather about a picnic is made of the work, and women and children turn out to the fields with bright faces and well-filled lunch baskets. Care must be taken to prevent bruising, but if picked in small baskets and immediately poured into the shipping basket there is little loss from bruised fruit. A portable fan is attached to the basket or barrel into which they are poured, and by this means all dead vines, sticks, leaves and dry berries are blown away.

Bank-Notes as Fuel.
The novel spectacle of a steamer being stoked with bank-notes was once witnessed at a Mediterranean port. Forty-five sacks of apparently valuable paper were tossed into the furnace of the vessel's boiler. The notes were canceled documents of the Bank of Algiers.

We beg to inform planters and the trade generally that the

has been put in order, and with excellent facilities, again opens its doors for the sale of

LOOSE TOBACCO ON THE FLOOR,

Light Weights or in Hogheads, or as our friends may prefer to sell. We invite the patronage of the thousands of our friends, who so liberally patronized us the past season, and earnestly solicit a trial shipment from those who have not so favored us.

We Have Good Quarters for Teams and Drivers in the Warehouse.

That the marketing of Tobacco on the open markets by concentrating the demands, will bring better results to sellers, is self-evident truth. Public meetings, stenographers, typewriters and their offspring "Resolutions," cannot better conditions. But united determination on the part of planters to offer their Tobacco on open markets to the highest bidder will bring face to fact every known demand for Tobacco. Help us to sell your tobacco for good prices by patronizing open market. It stands planters in hand to think of this.
